

Daniel Mendes [REDACTED]

28/09/2014 04:13 PM

To "sentencingcouncil@agd.nsw.gov.au"
<sentencingcouncil@agd.nsw.gov.au
>

cc

Subject Changes to the Bail Act

The new changes to the bail act where serious offenders must 'show cause' before bail can be granted are a huge improvement to the victim, and to the rest of the general public

The changes need to be extended to offences like:

Attempted Murder

Murder

Manslaughter

Sexual Assault

Rape

Offences that have involved children

Serious assaults, e.g one punch assaults

Serious Offenders

Repeat Offenders

Drink Drivers

Drug affected drivers

People driving whilst disqualified

People that show little or no remorse for the offence they committed

These sorts of crime categories need to be included in the new bail laws.

People that commit these sorts of offences show little or no remorse when they commit these sorts of crimes and keep getting light sentences for these types of crimes.

People that commit these sorts of crimes need to 'show cause' as to why they should be given bail. These changes need to be added to the new bail conditions

Sincerely

Daniel Mendes
[REDACTED]

Sent from my iPad